this collection brings together world leading and emerging scholars to explore how the concept of protection was applied to indigenous peoples of Britain's antipodean colonies tracing evolutions in protection from the 1830s until the end of the nineteenth century the contributors map the changes and continuities that marked it as an inherently ambivalent mode of colonial practice in doing so they consider the place of different historical actors who were involved in the implementation of protective policy who served as its intermediaries on the ground or who responded as its intended beneficiaries these included metropolitan and colonial administrators protectors or similar agents government interpreters and church affiliated missionaries settlers with economic investments in the politics of conciliation and the indigenous peoples who were themselves subjected to colonial policies drawing out some of the interventions and encounters lived out in the name of protection the book examines some of the critical roles it played in the making of colonial relations this book reviews changes in attitudes towards immigrants in Britain and the language that was used to put these feelings into words between 1921 and 2021 it analyses in what context attitudes were articulated and where they came from to determine what was specifically British it makes international comparisons it applies a historical and linguistic method for an analysis of so far relatively unused primary sources it also explores secondary resources and to provide context engages with the existing literature that deals with immigration but is not focused on attitudes or not always covers the entire period after 1921 and links post 1921 developments to what was set in motion before 1921 to sketch a long history that runs into the present the linguistic historical approach applied in this book brings it all together for the first time it discovers when and how attitudes to immigrants in Britain changed after 1921 where they originated and what language was used to voice these attitudes in particular specific words their meanings the under or overtones they bore and what people meant or felt when they used them when the Titanic sank so did the Edwardian age that created it in this brilliantly original history Gareth Russell recasts a tragedy we think we know to explore an era of seismic change
